Anti-Semitism

Mr Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps (a) she has taken since her appointment and (b) plans to take in the next six months to protect the Jewish community from anti-Semitic attacks; and if she will make a statement. [195]

James Brokenshire: The Government abhor all forms of hate crime. I look forward to meeting with representatives of all faith groups, including representatives of the Jewish community such as the Community Security Trust, in order that we can begin a dialogue on the issue.

House of Commons Statement and Debate

col 437 The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr William Hague): ... In the early hours of 31 May, the Israeli defence forces intercepted six of the eight boats sailing in the "Free Gaza" flotilla. The incident led to injury and deaths of a number of passengers, mainly on one of the vessels. ... The six intercepted vessels were brought to shore in the Israeli port of Ashdod. Two of the boats have been delayed by mechanical difficulties and remain at sea. We believe that they are en route to Gaza.

... it now appears that a total of 37 British nationals were involved in Sunday's events.

That is different from the number given by the Prime Minister a short time ago, which was based on what the Israeli ambassador had said previously. ... We have so far received access to 28 of those individuals, one of whom was deported yesterday. ...

There is real, understandable and justified anger at the events that have unfolded. The Government's position is as follows. Our clear advice to British nationals is not to travel to Gaza. However, we have made clear in public and to the Israeli Government that we deeply deplore the loss of life, and look to Israel to do everything possible to avoid a repeat of this unacceptable situation. The United Nations Security Council and the European Union have rightly condemned the violence that resulted in the loss of these lives. We continue to demand urgent information and access to all United Kingdom nationals involved. Their welfare is our top priority at this time, along with support for the families, who are understandably very worried. We are seriously concerned about the seizure of British nationals in international waters, and that aspect of the Israeli operation must form a key part of the investigation into the events. ...

Israel has told us that it wants to move as quickly as possible to deport people from the flotilla who are currently held in Israel. If they agree, they will be deported very quickly. Those who remain unwilling to leave will be allowed to stay for 72 hours in detention, which is the time limit allowed for them to appeal against deportation. Our understanding is that they will be deported after that. ... We understand that the individuals who were allegedly involved in violence against Israeli servicemen during the boarding will have their cases examined in line with Israeli legal advice. We do not currently believe that there are any British nationals in that last category, ...

The United Kingdom has played its full part in the European Union and the United Nations in agreeing on the need for a full, credible, impartial and independent investigation into these events. Our goal is a process that ensures full accountability for the events that occurred and commands the confidence of the international community, including international participation. Further discussions are taking place in other international forums, including NATO and the United Nations Human Rights Council. We will take the same principled stand in all our diplomatic efforts, and will stress to the Israeli Government the need for them to act with restraint and in line with their international obligations, given that their actions appear to have gone beyond what was warranted or proportionate. ...

The events aboard the flotilla were very serious and have captured the world's attention, but they should not be viewed in isolation. They arise from the unacceptable and unsustainable situation in Gaza, ...

... It is essential that there be unfettered access not only to meet the humanitarian needs of the people of Gaza, but to enable the reconstruction of homes and livelihoods and permit trade to take place. The Palestinian economy, whether in Gaza or on the west bank, is an essential part of a viable Palestinian state which I hope will one day live alongside Israel in peace and security.

As the once productive private sector has been decimated and ordinary Gazans have lost their jobs and their incomes, it is tunnel entrepreneurs and their Hamas backers who benefit. Hamas now has near total control of the economy. Other groups, even more radical and violent, are finding a place amid the misery and frustration felt by a generation of young people. In this context, current Israeli restrictions are counter-productive to Israel's long-term security. ...

The House should not forget the role played by Hamas in this conflict. It continues to pursue an ideology of violence and directly to undermine prospects for peace in the region. Violence has continued in recent days, with rocket fire from militants in Gaza and Israeli military incursions and air strikes in response. We call on Hamas to take immediate and concrete steps towards the Quartet principles, unconditionally to release Gilad Shalit, who has been held in captivity for four years, and to end its interference with the operations of non-governmental organisations and UN agencies in Gaza. ...

forces is the latest in a series of self-defeating and deadly moves by successive Israeli Governments in Gaza. We on the Opposition Benches join the international condemnation of an operation that was not self-defence but defence of a failed policy. Israel does have rights to security against terrorism, but we are talking here about a policy that has done nothing to defeat terrorism. Until the people of Gaza can be confident of an education for their children in schools not crumbling around them, of being able to feed and clothe their families adequately, and of being able to live without a prescribed list of what they can and cannot use in their kitchens, there is no way that the call of negotiation and peace will be heard. ... The latest episode cost innocent lives, undermines Palestinians and Arabs who believe in co-existence and the peaceful path to statehood, and further isolates Israel in the international community. The only people smiling are the rejectionists. ... This is a political crisis, not just a humanitarian one. Rocket attacks will be defeated only by a substantive political process towards a Palestinian state. ...

col 441 Mr Hague: ... I am disappointed and very dissatisfied with the Israeli response, as it has gone on over recent hours, on consular access. The reason why I do not condemn the Israelis unequivocally is because there is a complicating factor: many people on board the ships did not have their passports or had destroyed all their papers, so it is not necessarily immediately obvious to which nationality they belong. ...

It is my view and, from the discussions that I had last night, the view of the United States that the investigation should as a minimum have an international presence. It is possible for Israel to establish such an investigation and inquiry. ... commissions or inquiries have on occasion been established in Israel that have delivered stinging criticism of the Israeli Government and armed forces, although on other occasions such inquiries have not done so when we might have thought it was merited. ...

col 442 Sir Menzies Campbell (North East Fife) (LD): It is easy to be condemnatory of Israel and to argue for the raising of the blockade, but we must ask ourselves whether these things, taken by themselves, will bring about the solution that we all seek. Drawing on our colonial experience and recent experience in Northern Ireland, is it not clear that sooner or later, however controversial it may be, Hamas will have to be brought into the circle of discussions?

Mr Hague: ... Hamas must forswear violence, accept previous agreements and recognise the state of Israel. ... Hamas [must] make concrete movement towards those principles in order for the rest of the international community to engage with it ...

<http://www.publications.parliament.uk/pa/cm201011/cmhansrd/cm100602/debtext/100602-0004.htm#1006029000002>

col 443 Sir Gerald Kaufman (Manchester, Gorton) (Lab): ... Israelis committed a war crime of piracy in international waters, kidnapping and murder-and all in pursuit of upholding an illegal blockade on Gaza that amounts to collective punishment ...

col 444 Mrs Louise Ellman (Liverpool, Riverside) (Lab/Co-op): ... Does [the Foreign Secretary] accept that Israel has legitimate security needs against the enemy that is determined to destroy it?

Mr Hague: Of course Israel has legitimate security needs. That is why I stressed in my statement the role and responsibility of Hamas and the need for it and anyone else in Gaza to end rocket attacks on Israel. ... We need to find a way in which Israel can be assured that the smuggling of arms into Gaza does not take place while the flow of humanitarian aid and general economic trade can take place. ...

col 445 Sammy Wilson (East Antrim) (DUP): ... in the absence of a blockade of shipping into Gaza, how does [the Foreign Secretary] believe that the people of Israel can be protected from the unprovoked assaults by rockets and other armaments that are being imported into Gaza by the supporters of Hamas terrorists? ...

Jeremy Corbyn (Islington North) (Lab): In the past 18 months, Israel has killed 1,400 people during Operation Cast Lead. It has also carried out an assassination in Dubai using false passports, and now it has killed people on the high seas. On each occasion, there has been ritual condemnation, as there is today. I support that condemnation, but is it not time for us to take sanctions against Israel, such as lifting the EU-Israel trade agreement? Israel must understand that it cannot act illegally with impunity, and that it cannot kill people on the high seas in the way that it has just done.

Mr Hague: Israel will be listening to the condemnation in this House ... There is no doubt about that, but I do not think that the right policy is to impose sanctions. I think that the right policy is to urge on Israel the course of action that I have set out today. The restrictions and the blockade of Gaza should be lifted, and a truly credible and independent investigation should be set up. ...

col 446 Mr David Winnick (Walsall North) (Lab): Is it at all possible that the Israelis are aware of the worldwide revulsion at what has happened this week? The killings on the high seas had no justification whatsoever ... Is it not clear that Israel seems to show no concern at all for international opinion, and that it is out of control? ...

Mr Hague: I would not necessarily reach the conclusion that there is no awareness or concern about international opinion in Israel. In fact, there has been a good deal of criticism of the Israeli Government in the Israeli media over the past couple of days. Remember that Israel is a democracy. There is free expression of opinion. Sometimes that is bitterly critical of their own Ministers, and sometimes of their own armed forces. ...

col 448 Ann Clwyd (Cynon Valley) (Lab): ... we have pussy-footed around Israel for long enough. The only language that it understands is not the language of diplomacy but the language of the hobnail boot, by which I mean sanctions, telling it to stop building any more settlements, and insisting that it has talks with people-both sides ...

<http://www.publications.parliament.uk/pa/cm201011/cmhansrd/cm100602/debtext/100602-0005.htm>

col 449 Richard Burden (Birmingham, Northfield) (Lab): Is it not clear that Israel believes that it has done absolutely nothing wrong when it sends armed commandos to attack in international waters ships carrying humanitarian supplies to a tiny strip of land where more than 60% of the population are food-insecure? Could that not be because, for many years now, Israel has put itself above international law, without consequence from the international community?...

Dr Andrew Murrison (South West Wiltshire) (Con): Does my right hon. Friend agree that it is a little rich for the Israeli Government to justify their behaviour on the ground that they are denying matériel to a terrorist organisation when they have in the recent past shown themselves perfectly willing to import proscribed munitions for use against civilian targets?

Mr Hague: Again, my hon. Friend adds to a strength of feeling and to points made that will be widely noticed and, I hope, taken note of in Israel itself.

col 454 Mr Denis MacShane (Rotherham) (Lab): ... is the Foreign Secretary aware that the Hamas charter states: "There is no solution to the Palestinian problem except by Jihad. The initiatives, proposals and International Conferences are but a waste of time, an exercise in futility", that "our struggle against the Jews is extremely wide-ranging" and that "Israel...will remain erect until Islam eliminates it"? Such anti-Semitic, anti-Jewish language is the official doctrine and policy of Hamas. I share in all the points that the Foreign Secretary made and wish him well, but Hamas is part of the problem, not yet part of the solution.

Mr Hague:...I made that point in my statement in a slightly different way, by referring to the ideological motives of Hamas and reminding the House that there is a Hamas dimension to the whole problem. It has refused to forswear violence, recognise previous agreements and recognise Israel's right to exist, and until it starts making some concrete movement towards those things, it will be very difficult for the international community to discuss the future with it. ...

House of Lords Statement and Short Debate

Gaza Flotilla

Commons statement read by Lord Howell of Guildford

debate includes:

col 261 Baroness Kinnock of Holyhead: ... All violations of international law should be dealt with thoroughly and speedily. It remains the case that laying siege to a whole population is untenable, callous and tragic, and that should be addressed by Israel and the international community. Storming a ship carrying aid is proof, if proof is needed, of the need to end the blockade. All efforts now must focus on building that peace and security which that troubled region so needs.

col 262 Lord Howell of Guildford: ... Of course we must respect Israel's complete right to look after its own security and to do what it can to ensure that bombs and dangerous weapons are not also being filtered into Gaza that are then used against Israel—that is a perfectly natural and understandable stance—but that has to be consistent with allowing all other supplies, including humanitarian supplies, to get into Gaza and lift the blockade on all the normal accoutrements of daily life that the Gazan people so desperately need, including all conceivable medical supplies and food. We think that that is a wrong stance by Israel, and we urge the Israelis to change it and to abide by Resolution 1860. ... we do not think that the attempt to bust the blockade by sailing towards Gaza with ships loaded in various ways is the right answer. The answer is to lift the blockade, for the Israelis to check, justifiably, that armaments are not going to be pushed into Gaza and for matters to be handled in a much more civilised way than they have been in the past week. So we think that sailing into Gaza is not the best way to try to bust the blockade, but at the same time we believe that if the Israelis interfere further with shipping, as they may well do, they should go about it in ways that are more proportionate and less obviously heavy-handed than the miserable affair in which they have become involved in the past few days.

col 263 Lord Wright of Richmond: ... If, as we must all hope, there is now a realistic chance of lifting Israel's inhuman and unacceptable blockade of Gaza, I hope that the Minister will be able to reassure those of us who have long argued for contacts with the elected authorities in Gaza that the coalition is now prepared to open talks with those authorities, if only to be able to help facilitate the introduction of necessary and vital supplies to alleviate the suffering and unemployment of the people of Gaza. Of course we should not ignore the role of Hamas in launching attacks against Israel but does the Minister agree that, in almost every case, offers of a ceasefire from Hamas have been broken on the Israeli side? ...

Lord Howell of Guildford: ... the Government do not believe that we should talk to Hamas until it is prepared to take concrete steps some degree in the direction of the quartet's proposals. So far, it has shown that it is not prepared to take those concrete steps. ...

col 264 ...given that the United Nations and the international community have said what they have, Israel must be getting very near illegality in maintaining such a vicious blockade ... the trouble is that many issues and questions are flying round. For example, were these ships sabotaged? ... Why were there 400 or 500 so-called activists on a ship if it was meant to be carrying humanitarian materials? Perhaps it would have been better to carry those materials than so many bodies. ...

col 267 Lord Elystan-Morgan: ... is it not the case that both sovereign states of Israel and Egypt are, as a matter of general precept, within the bounds of international law in seeking to prevent the supply to Hamas of material of a military, or potential military, nature? ...

<http://www.publications.parliament.uk/pa/ld201011/ldhansrd/text/100602-0003.htm>

col 268 Lord Phillips of Sudbury: ... listen to ... the quarter or third of the population of Israel who view Israel's strategy and policy, in particular the colonisation of the West Bank, as being totally self-defeating for its long-term security, totally abhorrent in terms of human rights and totally against international law. ... Some debates that one listens to in this Chamber-I mean no disrespect to any noble Lord-seem to be based on a misunderstanding of the abjectness of the condition of not only the Gazans but also the people in the West Bank and of the ritual, systemic humiliation and violence to which they are subject. It is all very well talking about a few home-made rockets-and I do not defend them-but there is an occupying army in the West Bank and there was a pulverisation of Gaza a year ago, in which 1,400 people were killed as against 13. I urge the Government to get real about these issues and not to pretend that there is parity between one side and the other.

Lord Howell of Guildford: I think that my noble friend's views are very widely shared. ... <http://www.publications.parliament.uk/pa/ld201011/ldhansrd/text/100602-0004.htm>

Prime Minister's Questions

col 427 Ms Harriet Harman: ... May I ask the Prime Minister about the Israeli interception of the Gaza flotilla? I am sure that he agrees that there has been a tragic loss of life, which has angered the Palestinians and dismayed friends of Israel, too. Can he tell the House what is the current position of the British nationals who have been detained by the Israelis? Will he tell us how the Government can contribute to international efforts to make the Israelis recognise that the blockade of Gaza is prolonging the suffering of the Palestinians and making peace in the middle east even harder to achieve? ...

The Prime Minister: ... What has happened is completely unacceptable; we should be clear about that. ... 42 British nationals are caught up in this. ... I would say ... that friends of Israel-and I count myself a friend of Israel-should be saying to the Israelis that the blockade actually strengthens Hamas's grip on the economy and on Gaza, and it is in their own interests to lift it and to allow these vital supplies to get through.

Alistair Burt: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I both look forward to visiting the region in due course. We are not able to provide further details for security reasons.

UK Parliament Early Day Motions

Bob Russell (124) European Union relations with Israel - That this House considers that the continued flouting by Israel of United Nations resolutions, and its continued inhumane actions against the Palestinian people, are so serious that it is inappropriate for the European Union to continue to have special economic, trading and other relations with Israel; and therefore requests the Government to call on the European Union to terminate the favourable arrangements it has with Israel.

<http://edmi.parliament.uk/EDMi/EDMDetails.aspx?EDMID=41040&SESSION=905>

Bob Russell (125) European sporting and cultural relations with Israel - That this House considers that since Israel is not in Europe then it is not appropriate that it competes in European sporting and cultural events; and therefore requests the Government to encourage organisers of events for European countries to exclude Israel.

<http://edmi.parliament.uk/EDMi/EDMDetails.aspx?EDMID=41041&SESSION=905>

Richard Burden (127) Israel and Gaza flotilla - That this House is appalled by the loss of life associated with Israel's attack on the flotilla of ships carrying humanitarian aid to Gaza; notes that UK and other nationals have been held by Israel despite the attack having taken place in international waters; endorses the call of the United Nations Secretary General for a prompt, impartial, credible and transparent investigation conforming to international standards; recognises that Israel's blockade which has destroyed the economy of Gaza and deepened poverty still inflicts widespread suffering and, by imposing collective punishment on the people of Gaza, is itself contrary to international law; and calls on the international community to require Israel to end its blockade and to redouble international efforts to secure a lasting settlement with a secure and independent state of Palestine alongside a secure and independent Israel.

Against the odds, UK-funded Gazan businesses grow

... the UK is proud to support the 3rd Palestine Investment Conference, which opened in Bethlehem this week (2-3 June 2010).

Nearly 120 Palestinian businesses, some of which have already established export markets ranging from North America to Russia, China and the Gulf, exhibited at the conference. For the 900 potential investors, from over 30 countries, it will provide investment opportunities in small and medium enterprises (SMEs) from across the West Bank and Gaza.

A joint UK Department for International Development and World Bank funded scheme, the Facility for New Market Development (FNMD) works to assist businesses grow across the Palestinian Territories. In Gaza, 40 businesses have been supported.

Decimated by continuing restrictions on the import and export of goods and with close to 40% unemployment, it is crucial that the Gazan economy is not forgotten. For FNMD-supported businesses in Gaza, support is vital if they are to expand into new markets or develop new products. The UK is delighted to see nine Gazan companies exhibiting at the Bethlehem conference, all funded by FNMD. FNMD highlights:

- 192 businesses supported, including 40 in Gaza
- FNMD clients have entered 28 new markets across five continents
- 322 new jobs have been created
- 17 products are now being made in the Palestinian Territories for the first time

Scottish Parliament Motion

S3M-06442 Pauline McNeill (Glasgow Kelvin) (Scottish Labour): Attack by Israeli Commandos on the Humanitarian Flotilla in International Waters Heading for Gaza— That the Parliament condemns the attack by Israeli commandos on the flotilla of six ships in international waters heading for Gaza and is shocked at the action that resulted in the deaths of innocent civilians and injury to others involved taking humanitarian aid to Gaza; notes with deepest concern the reaction around the world with an emergency meeting of the Arab League, protests from the Greek Government and condemnation from the Turkish Government and 27 European countries that have called on Israel to explain its actions; believes that this has critical repercussions for the peace process and world security; further believes that the blockade on Gaza has prevented most humanitarian aid reaching Palestinians in the Gaza Strip and that the ongoing siege is a key obstacle to peace in the region; believes that there must be an immediate and thorough investigation into this by the UN Security Council, and calls on the international community to wake up and take appropriate urgent action to hold Israel to account for its actions and save the peace process in the interest of world security and Palestinians and Israelis who want to live in lasting peace.

Scottish Government

First Minister writes to Israeli Ambassador

... The violence and deaths aboard the Mavi Marmara are of clear international concern. The subsequent detention of a number of UK Nationals, including a number of people who reside in Scotland is also of clear concern. The Scottish Government would wish to add its voice to those throughout the wider international community in condemning the actions taken by the Israeli military. We also support the UN Security Council's call for an impartial inquiry and hope that your Government will support this. There are clear humanitarian needs in the Gaza strip and the blockade only adds to these. The Scottish Government would urge Israel to lift the blockade and allow humanitarian aid in as a matter of urgency.

General Assembly President and Qatari leader discuss Gaza flotilla raid

The Israeli military "attack" on the humanitarian flotilla headed for Gaza, which led to the deaths of 10 civilians, was among the issues discussed by General Assembly President Ali Treki during a meeting in Doha with the Emir of Qatar, Sheikh Hamad bin Khalifa Al-Thani. ...Dr. Treki and the Emir condemned the attack, and called for the "immediate lifting of siege on Gaza, and the release of all detainees," according to a statement issued by the spokesperson for the Assembly President. ...

In addition to meeting with the Qatari leader, Dr. Treki also delivered a keynote address at the 10th Doha Forum on Democracy, Development and Free Trade. ... The Assembly President ... reaffirmed that the international community has denounced the atrocities committed by the Nazi against the Jews as a genocide and crime against humanity; underscored that the international community also adopted collective measures against ethnic cleansing; and stressed that the world should address the collective punishment measures against Palestinians in the occupied territories.
